

Oleksandr Burdun - CTO Resume

Summary

Engineering leader and system architect with a track record of scaling engineering organizations and restoring delivery predictability. Built a frontend department from 1 to ~50 across multiple self-managed cross-functional teams, with an onboarding model that cut ramp-up from 3-8 weeks to 2-3 days.

Operates at the intersection of technology strategy and execution: turned around a multi-department, unowned project and launched a global reskin of a 2012-era title in 5 months with a 12-person team; led technical direction across 10+ engineers on a large-scale title, aligning multi-team client and backend work.

Aligns platform and architecture choices with business goals: refactored a hardcoded monetization system into a backend-driven capability enabling dozens of safe live-economy iterations per day; earlier microservices work proved an approach that later became part of standard architecture at company scale (~4,000 employees).

Cross-functional leader comfortable coordinating with art, QA, analytics, and LiveOps. Maintains hands-on depth through continuous R&D (AI-native workflows, infra, and developer tooling) to inform pragmatic decisions and unblock execution when needed.
