

Oleksandr Burdun - CTO Resume

Summary

Operator for transitions when a product or team has outgrown its current stage: establish clear ownership, re-set scope, and move execution from stalled to shipped. Examples include taking an unowned, multi-department prototype to a global launch in five months and stabilizing delivery with a cross-functional team.

Builder of engineering organizations and delivery systems. Scaled a frontend department from 1 person to roughly 50 across multiple small, self-managed agile teams, with an onboarding model that cut ramp-up to 2-3 days (vs. 3-8 weeks elsewhere).

Aligns technology strategy with business outcomes. Drove a monetization architecture shift from client-bound, hardcoded configs to a configurable, backend-driven model that enabled dozens of safe experiments per day and removed recurring stability issues.

Leads across engineering, product, design, QA, analytics, LiveOps, and external partners. Improves processes and CI/CD to increase predictability, while staying close enough to the code and architecture to unblock execution when needed.
